Projects are designed to benefit all involved, the volunteers and participants, the local hosting communities, environment, and Iceland as a whole. Our activities include voluntary service and non-formal learning, international camps, seminars, training courses, group discussions, environmental education and awareness campaigns as well as cultural actions.

WORKCAMPS

Workcamps are the most common form of short-term volunteering, where a group of volunteers work and live together on a project which has been identified by a local community or working with that community.

SEEDS workcamps generally last for 2 up to 3 weeks

The types of the projects developed by SEEDS are mainly nature or environmental oriented, and they can be for instance building of walking paths or hiking trails, cleaning of the coastline, reforestation and erosion control works, construction or renovation of a community building, etc...

International workcamps bring together volunteers from different nationalities and backgrounds, aiming at building up international understanding and therefore encouraging peace while working for an identified need of the local community. Groups' sizes vary between 5 and 30 participants.
